Pfc. Anthony H. Larson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert V. Larson, 23708 Lucille Ave., has become one of the nation's first soldiers to take part in field exercises testing the Army's new "pentomic" battle concept. The pentomic tactical plan features streamlined units with great mobility and firepower able to meet the needs of Atomic and Missile Age warfare. Pfc. Larson is serving as a Track Vehicle Mechanic in Troop "B" of the 4th Infantry Division's 2nd Reconnaissance Squadron, 8th Cavalry. The 8th Cavalry took the part of a simulated "Aggressor" force in the tests.

Jet fighter support, supplies parachuted from giant C-124 "Globemasters" and the mushrooming blasts of "atomic" bombs made from TNT and napalm added front line realism to the tests.

In addition to the 3rd Division, the 1st Marine Air Wing, the U.S. Seventh Fleet, units of the 1st Marine Division from Camp Pendleton, Calif., and Philippine units will make up the assault force for the amphibious exercise, code named "Operation Strongback."

The actual assault will be made at Dingalan Bay, a training area used in the past for similar operations by the Okinawa based Marines.
